LALIFF 2018 ANNOUNCES PROGRAMMING, FEATURING SUNDANCE FILM FESTIVAL'S AUDIENCE AWARD-WINNING "THE SENTENCE" AND RISING STAR ROSA SALAZAR'S DIRECTORIAL DEBUT

Academy Award-nominated actor Edward James Olmos announced 2018 festival programming for the long-awaited return of LALIFF, the largest Latinx film festival to be hosted out of Los Angeles.

The festival returns with expanded programming, including both short and long form films created, directed, starring or produced by the next generation of Latinx entertainers

LALIFF, aimed at showcasing Latino perspectives through art will kick-off opening night with the Los Angeles premier of "The Sentence," winner of the "Audience Award – U.S. Documentary" at the 2018 Sundance Film Festival

Many local and international guests will attend the festival, including iconic Spanish cult filmmaker, Alex de la Iglesia, whose latest comedy Perfect Strangers, is a hilarious commentary on how smartphones can be disastrous for relationships, Veneno, The First Fall, starring Manny Perez, details the life of Dominican wrestler Jack Veneno, who himself was inspired by the films of "El Santo." Both Manny Perez and filmmaker Tabaré Blanchard will attend.
